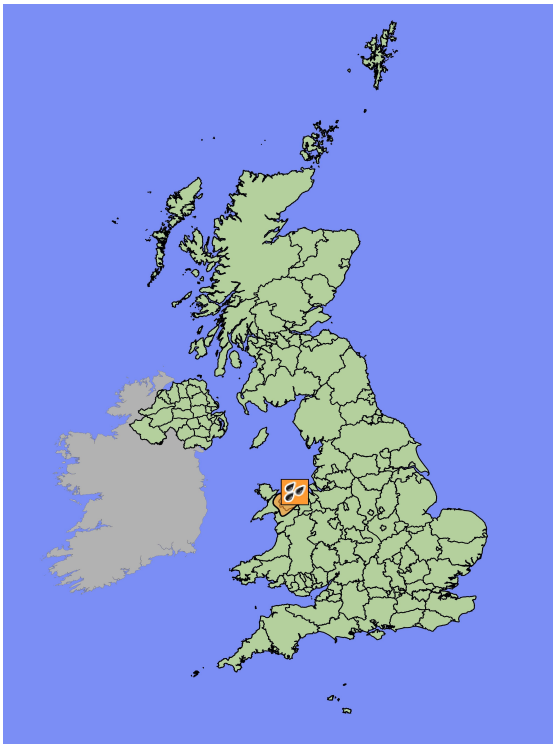
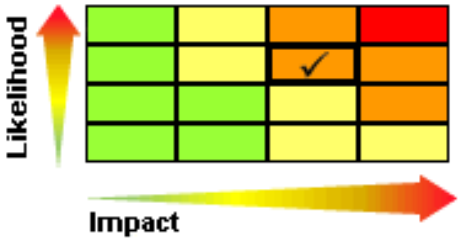
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
A depression crossing southern UK will swing the frontal zone back into North Wales by Monday afternoon, with persistent rain continuing through the evening. Amounts of rain will be building up with 20 to 40 mm widely and in excess of 60 mm on high ground, particularly on the northern side of hills.

The Met Office have issued an Amber Warning of Rain

Valid from 11:30 on Mon, 26th Nov 2012 until 23:00 on Mon, 26th Nov 2012

After heavy rain on Sunday, wet conditions through Monday will allow large totals to build up across the area.

The public should be prepared for the risk of flooding.
